At Spring meeting

Chamber will honor teaching excellence

Excellence in education will be recognized by the Appomattox County Chamber of Commerce at their annual Spring general membership meeting.

Steve Marshall, chairman of the chamber's recognition committee, said at Monday night's board of directors meeting that the committee had decided to institute "Teacher of the Year" awards for the four schools in Appomattox County.

Marshall said the awards, patterned after a similar program sponsored by the Nelson County Chamber of Commerce, will allow the teachers in the county to vote among themselves for the four outstanding teachers in the school system.

The awards program, which has been approved by Superintendent of Schools Lloyd Walton, will culminate with the presentation of a certificate of recognition to the four teachers at the chamber's spring meeting.

The chamber's board of directors voted Monday night to give the four teachers a year's free membership in the chamber of commerce, as well.

Marshall said that ballots will be distributed at the four schools in time to allow teachers to vote, and votes to be tallied before the spring meeting.

Floyd Williams, chairman of the program committee, said he is currently working on securing a speaker for the meeting, which he says will be scheduled for late May or early June.

Members of the board of directors agreed that the speaker should be entertaining as well as informative.

In another matter, Chamber President Jim Nolen presented the directors with the rough draft of the Appomattox County directory of businesses, completed this week by the students of John McHale, Distributive Education Coordinator at Appomattox County High School.

The directory includes more than 280 listings in alphabetical order. Nolen noted that chamber members can help to proof read the document for possible updates, clarifications, and typographical errors.

Board member Bill Slagle said that he feels the directory should be professionally printed for sale to persons requesting information about the county, after it has been thoroughly proofed and finalized.

Nolen also pointed out that the 20,000 1983 Historic Appomattox Railroad Festival brochures, which board members voted to pay for this year, have been printed and partially distributed. The chamber's directors agreed to pay for printing the brochures following a request from the Railroad Festival Board.

Nolen also pointed out that the chamber's membership total has reached 96. Seven new members recorded in the last month include Ida H. Campbell, John L. Wilson, the First National Bank of Farmville, Pamplin Branch, Busy Bee Cleaning Service, J.A. Burke and Co., Inc., Peggy Romanac, and Donald Webb.

Membership Committee Chairman Lloyd Vaughan noted that the committee will meet and determine a viable plan of action for a sustained membership drive to help continue the chamber membership roster's growth.

Chamber board of director members also voted to commend the Times-Virginian newspaper for the editorial recognition given the chamber in the newspaper's recent "Appomattox County Pride and Heritage" special section.

WATKINS M. ABBITT, JR., of Appomattox County, was appointed by Gov. Charles Robb last week to serve on the state's Uranium Administrative Group.

Abbitt gets appointment

Watkins M. Abbitt, Jr., has been appointed by Gov. Charles S. Robb to the Uranium Administrative Group, a committee formed to study the possible impact of uranium mining and milling in Virginia.

The Uranium Administrative Group is comprised of representative of the state's Water Control Board, Board of Health, Air Pollution Control Board, Department of Conservation and Economic Development, Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services, and Division of Industrial Development.

Shelia Prindiville, administrator of the Council on the Environment, is also a member of the group, as are at-large representatives from Pittsylvania and Halifax Counties.

The Uranium Administrative Group was established by Senate Bill 155, introduced by Sen. Danny Bird, who is chairman of the Coal and Energy Commission.

A uranium subcommittee, formed in 1981 to conduct research for the Coal and Energy Commission, has determined with the assistance of consultants that the health risks involved in uranium mining and milling are limited, if the proper operating precedures and management policies are established and enforced.

The subcommittee recommended that further research be conducted to determine if the benefits from uranium operations in Virginia would offset costs and potential hazards. The Uranium Administrative Group will assess this question, and report its findings to the Coal and Energy Commission by Dec. 1, 1983.

Approximately 40,000 acres of potential uranium-mining sites have been leased in and around Pittsylvania County by the Marline Oil Corp. Other sites, largely around Culpeper, may also hold mineable uranium deposits.

Abbitt, an Appomattox County resident, also serves on the state Water Control Board and is an active outdoorsman and sportsman in Appomattox and Central Virginia.

Board accepts bid to remove asbestos

The Appomattox County School Board accepted a low bid of $5,650 for removal of asbestos from two county school buildings during their regular monthly meeting last Wednesday.

The bid, which was submitted by G and B Insulation, Inc., was one of five considered for the project. The high bid came from Masterclean of North Carolina, Inc., for $24,850.

The project calls for removal of asbestos material from the vo-ag boiler room at Appomattox Middle School, and from the ceiling of the mechanical room at Appomattox County High School.

Board members also approved a change order increase for the renovation project underway at Appomattox Primary School. The increase totals $3,590, bringing the contract price of the project to $208,022. The change will include installation of two additional 110-volt duplex outlets in each of 18 classrooms in the school.

New textbooks recommended by a committee for adoption in the county's school system were approved by board members at Wednesday's meeting, also. The Ginn Reading Program, including textbooks in spelling, writing, secondary science and reading for grades K through 7, were recommended and approved for the county.

In other business, board members:

* Approved a report regarding possible golf courses that may be available for the Appomattox golf team to use next year. The Board approved using either Ivy Hills or Cedar Hills.

*Received a report from Appomattox Primary Parent-Teacher Association requesting improvements in the Appomattox County Library program. The Board instructed the Superintendent to meet with members of the PTA to discuss ways to improve library services.

*Approved a request from the Historical Railroad Festival Board to use the Middle School gymnasium to exhibit antique furniture and collectibles, October 7-9, 1983.

*Received a report that the Town Council of Appomattox has passed a grease ordinance. Because of this ordinance, grease traps will be installed under the sinks in the cafeteria of each school.

*Reviewed projected enrollments by schools for the period 1983-84 through 1989-90. With a projected enrollment of 2426 pupils in 1983-84, the enrollment will drop to 2192 in 1989-90.

*Set the next regular meeting at 3:30 p.m. on May 11. The Board will meet for lunch at 12 noon and visit in several schools prior to an executive session at 3 p.m.

Appomattox County's volunteers are recognized

By FRANCES H. PAULETTE

A day now and then, a few hours here and there, time given whenever it is needed . . . it all adds up to helping others, the program of Volunteerism in Appomattox County.

Although a certain amount of volunteer work had been done prior to that time, it was in October of 1980 that it became more organized when Mrs. Jenny Fratrick was named coordinator of the Volunteer Services Program in Appomattox County.

On April 20 a Volunteer Recognition luncheon was held at St. Anne's Episcopal Church honoring those individuals who have participated in the program. The luncheon was made possible through the generosity of the Farmers National Bank, with Mr. William Hunter, president, representing the bank at the luncheon.

Speaker for the occasion was Ms. Lyn Benson, Volunteer Services coordinator with the Department of Social Services for the Commonwealth of Virginia.

"The State Department of Social Services has been deeply committed to the Volunteer Program since the passage of the State Governors' Volunteers Act in 1976," said Ms. Benson.

"It is time for us to stop and celebrate the willingness of millions of our neighbors to get involved in their respective communities to help solve different problems," she commented.

The first type of service the volunteers have provided has been in the area of material donations. When a person in this community who is not eligible for service has a need for clothing or food, for example, the volunteers have gotten together to help out.

The second type of service the volunteers give is supportive service to the agency. The volunteers have worked side by side with members of the department of social services to support their efforts to help others in the community.

The third service provided by the volunteers is an educational service to the community. By working with the agency, volunteers have learned that a welfare department does much more to help the community than simply pass out checks and food stamps.

Through volunteering, individuals have learned about the true needs of neighbors in Appomattox and have been able to educate others about these needs and what the Department of Social Services does to meet these needs.

The fourth service the volunteers provide are direct services offered to the community members. Providing transportation to medical appointments, the friendly visiting, the help in looking for jobs, all this is part of the volunteer program.

"Appomattox County is so very fortunate," commented Jenny Fratrick, "In that civic organizations, schools, businesses, churches have come together in a joint effort to help whenever a need arises."

Appomattox County has another group of volunteers who are indeed, making the county proud... the Youth Volunteers, the only group of organized youth volunteers in the State of Virginia.

"Betsy Carter is really the backbone of this group," commented Virginia Babcock, director of the Appomattox County Department of Social Services. "She is persistent and an excellent group leader for young people," added Babcock.

These teens have been formerly meeting once a month since October. Their list of activities since their organization is impressive: covering the MD team booth at the local railroad Festival; disseminating fliers and answering questions, and raised enough money through a bake sale to take social service child clients to Lynchburg to dinner, a movie and to see the Christmas decorations, an activity that was a part of their December schedule.

"The wealth of Appomattox County is the earing spirit of its people. This attitude is evident in the willingness of the volunteers in this county under the direction of Jenny Fratrick," concluded Babcock.

Father Darkleaf

By CALVIN ROBINSON

By a margin of about eight to two, weather continues to be No. One in conversation. Favorite opening remark: "Short Spring, wasn't it?" Usually takes me a week or more to adjust to changes in time, to or from Daylight Savings. This time around made it easy, simply by letting Brightleaf take charge of the clocks and watches. And it is a windy morning. Purchased a few tomato plants and need the garden spot to dry out. Plowed and disced, just waiting. Have nine packets of seed, including decorative gourds and sunflowers. Timed myself with the lawnmower. Took an hour and twenty minutes to do my lawn. What's your record?

Fine and dandy. ACHS is in first place in Seminole District baseball standings. Seven wins, two losses. Liberty a close second, seven and three.

Congratulations. Mrs. Virginia M. Babcock, director of Appomattox Department of Social Services, has received a Meritorious Service award for her work in that department.

Thanks to a valued reader of this column, John L. Pachuta, Sr., Baltimore, Md., am enjoying copies of two most interesting newspapers. The Sun Times, of Twin Falls, Idaho and The Salt Lake Tribune, Salt Lake City, Utah. Mr. and Mrs. Pachuta recently attended the wedding of their daughter, Emily in Twin Falls. Put Appomattox on your list. Enjoyed Dan Valentine's column: "Nothing Serious" in the Salt Lake Tribune. He reports a recent survey showing chicken noodle to be the most popular soup in Utah. Also: "A statesman thinks three times before he says something - and four times before he says nothing."

I presume it is a sign that the ground is soggy wet. Found six earthworms getting in a bit of sun on Martha Street. Mentioned it to a friend. He said had'em by the shovelful over his way.

Fisherman's delight. Reports say bluefish are plentiful, and hungry, in coastal waters. At one marina they said, "bluefish are running out of our ears." Claimed the average boat returns with at least 150. If'n bluefish like earthworms we have a deal.

Paused while lawnmowing to watch a butterfly. A flower in bloom is a thing of beauty. Also a source of food to butterflies and such.

Welcome to Dr. Daniel E. Scott and family. He is the new minister at Liberty Baptist Church.

Thanks for reading and seeya around Appomattox, A Growing Town.
